THE CURSE OF BEAUTY

1 We've all heard stories about how attractive people make more money than the unattractive. We've read how babies stare longer and cry less when held by pretty people, and heard tales of handsome children doing better in school, given special attention by their teachers. And if we hadn't already
5 come to terms with the belief that beautiful people are generally better all-around, a study late last month revealed we notice the intricacies of their personality more, too—simply because we're better listeners when we can stare at a beautiful face.

10 But what if we told you that when it comes to online dating, good looks could actually hurt you? "OK Cupid" decided to find out. The second-most-popular online dating site, for which statistical pseudo-sociology has become something of a pastime, they cross-examined data from thousands of users to try and determine what kind of women most men find attractive.

15 What did they find? That the more men as a group disagree about a woman's looks, the more they end up liking her; that guys tend to ignore girls widely-considered to be attractive; that having some men think you're ugly actually works in a woman's favor.

Option B

PARENTS PAY CHILDREN LESS POCKET MONEY BECAUSE OF RECESSION

1 One in four parents has cut the amount of pocket money they give their children as a direct result of the recession. The average child between 4 and 15 gets £5.80 pocket money a week, but 24% of parents admit they have reduced the amount they give their children. Seven out of 10 parents expect
5 their children to help around the house in exchange for cash, from tidying their own rooms to mowing the lawn.

Around 38% of children regularly save the money they receive, with 35% having a savings account and 58% keeping their money in a piggy bank. Children in London get the most pocket money, at an average of £7.81
10 a week. Boys typically get more money than girls. They are more than twice as likely as girls to receive between £16 and £20 a week, but they are also more likely to spend it in days.

The majority of parents surveyed said they have had the financial equivalent of the "birds and bees" conversation with their offspring,
15 discussing where money comes from. You can never start financial education early enough, and this approach is by far the best way to teach children good habits.
